BACK TO SCHOOL

STARTING SCHOOL

Pencils have been sharpened and summer activities filed away until next year. Classes have begun for Upland School District students.

Buses rolled early Monday after brief pit stops for general maintenance during the school break.

Enrollment at the elementary schools is up more than expected, particularly involving kindergarteners, according to Superintendent George Renworth.

The increase in the number of students will mean more teachers will have to be hired and some classes will have to be reshuffled at Magnolia, Valencia, Upland and Citrus elementary schools.

Classes at the four elementaries will be overcrowded for about 10 days until additional teachers can be hired, he said.

A total of 5,406 students attended school Monday, six more than Renworth earlier had predicted.

"I think 1984-85 is going to be even better than past years. I think it will be a good year," Renworth said.

Several of the schools got a bit of a facelift during the summer break. Air conditioning was installed at many of the rooms at Baldy View and Foothill Knolls schools. Sierra Vista, the district's oldest school, is the only facility without air conditioning.

Record high temperatures in the West Valley during the past week worried some school officials in other districts about whether or not the first day of school would be altered. Classes in the Upland District reported Monday as scheduled.

Noreen Villocino, Sierra Vista secretary, said classes went on as usual despite afternoon temperatures in the 90s and no air conditioning.

Fans were placed in every room to offer some relief. "It's hot! Everyone's doing the best they can," Mrs. Villocino.

While the heat might have worried some administrators, others were unconcerned. "The heat will not be a factor. In fact, it may be a plus. The young people will want to stay in the classroom," said Randy Smith, Foothill Knolls School principal.

Monday was a "typical school day" at Pioneer Junior High School, according to Principal Roger Schulte. "Opening day went very smoothly," he said.

Only a minor hitch marred the day. The school's air conditioning went out for a short time, but was working later in the afternoon, according to the superintendent's office.

"The day was very exciting and hectic for the first two hours," said Bob Clarke, Baldy View School principal.

PTA volunteers helped orient some of the young students who were facing their first day at school, Clarke said.

"The only confusion we had was caused by Admission Day. Many parents called to find out if our school would be open since schools in Los Angeles County were closed in observance of the state holiday," he said.

Now that the first day is safely out of the way, district personnel are looking forward to some new district additions.

One new feature this year will be the state-sponsored mentor teacher program. Renworth said the district is excited about the idea.

Five teachers have been selected to participate. The individuals will act as mentors to other teachers in the areas of computer science, social studies and mathematics.

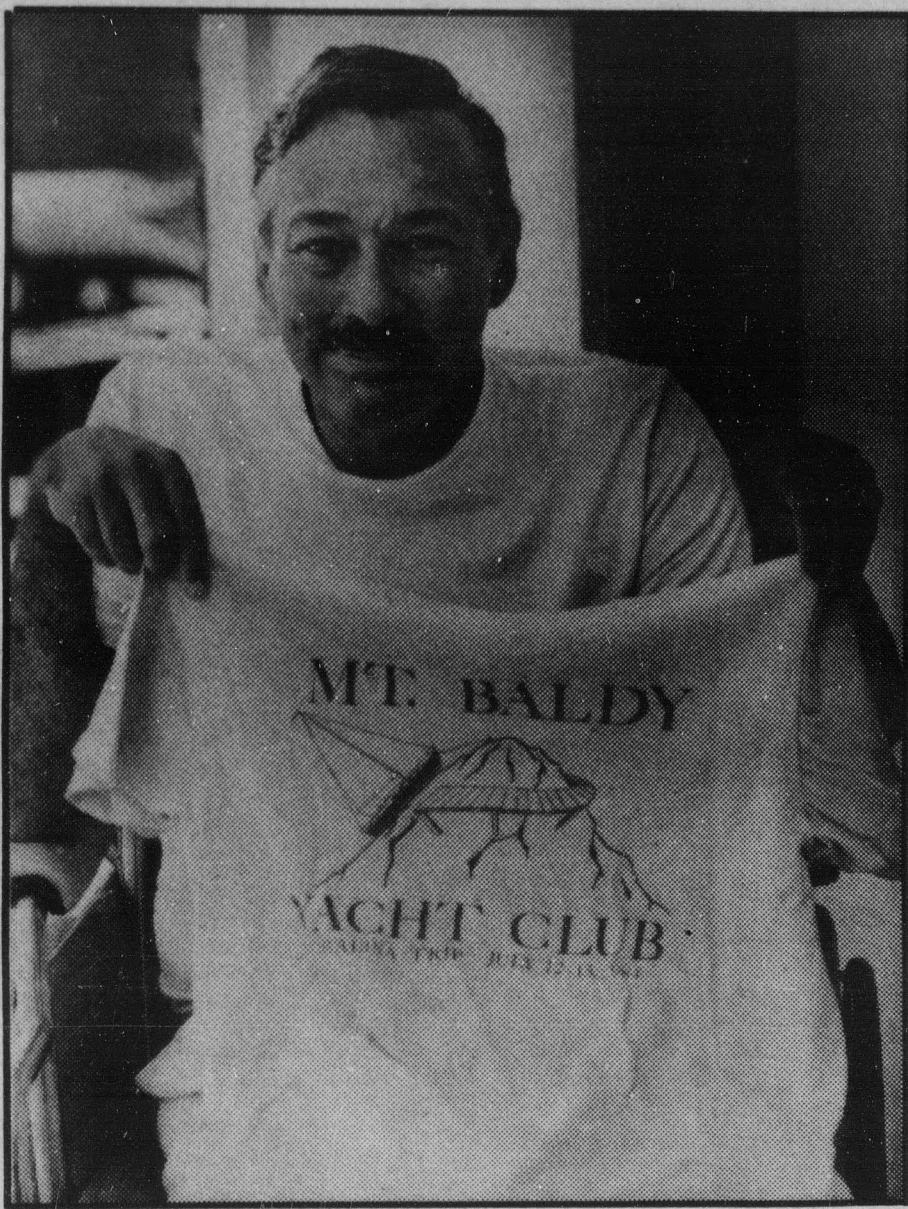

Two or three additional teachers will join the program soon. Teachers and students should benefit equally, Renworth said. □

Mt. Baldy group sails into the fund raising business

Does yachting on Mt. Baldy sound impossible? Possibly.

But don't tell the 55 members of the Mt. Baldy Yacht Club.

The group formed this summer and helped raise

Tom Moga, an Upland attorney, met Keegan while completing a three-year sailing trip around the world.

"We have a goal of $1,500 and will have another benefit and raise the balance of it," Moga said.

The other benefit is a dinner party with a nautical

"It was our first function, 55 people sailing. We raised $800," club member Jean Gwynn said in reference to the fund raiser — a trip to Catalina.

theme scheduled for Sept. 29.

This year's fund raiser will benefit Keegan, but members are having so much fun at their get-togethers, they plan to continue annual events to help other people in need.

The sea, friends aid in accident victim's recovery

By Terri Tirella

"I didn't think of suicide ... but I didn't mind if I died," recalls Tom Keegan, an Alta Loma resident.

Keegan was going up to Mt. Baldy on a motorcycle in May when he met a car in his lane. "I knew it was going to hit me," he said. So Keegan pulled into gravel to the side of the road and lost control of the steering.

The motorcycle hit a boulder and Keegan flew over the bike and landed on his back on a rock the size of a grapefruit. The resulting paralysis made Keegan a paraplegic.

"When I realized I couldn't walk, then went through a bout with pneumonia, I really didn't care if I existed," he said.

Doctors performed surgery on Keegan, welding his hip bone to his back so he could sit up; otherwise he would not be able to use a chair.

Getting dressed takes him about an hour, and learning how to get from his bed into a wheelchair took a while, Keegan said.

Depression was easy to slip into, but it didn't take long for him to realize "the sorrier you feel, the sorrier you become" so he decided to take a more positive approach.

His friends in the Mt. Baldy Yacht Club planned a sailing trip to Catalina as a fund raiser for him. "They figured it might liven me up or be psychologically beneficial for me on a boat. They knew I needed a scooter (modified electric wheelchair)," he said.

Keegan has spent most of his 45 years on water. He was a deckhand on private yachts at the age of 12 and a mate on Mississippi River towboats and barges before embarking on his oceanic career. He's had a variety seagoing adventures, including piloting a ship into harbor during a hurricane when he was 19.

Keegan was a captain on a geophysical research vessel (Continued on page 14)

Upland plans commercial watch program

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland police want to help take a bite out of crime in the city's commercial areas.

The police department, in conjunction with the Upland Chamber of Commerce, wants to start a business watch program if city merchants are interested.

The project is similar to the neighborhood watch programs currently in operation, according to Upland Police Agent Dick Noville.

"Although crime is not a particular problem in the commercial areas in the city, commercial burglaries are up from last year," Noville said.

According to department statistics comparing the periods from the end of July 1983 and July 1984, commercial burglaries have increased from 136 to 156. Figures for armed robberies also increased during the same period from 30 to 38 incidents.

Noville was to give a presentation about the proposed program this week during a meeting of the Upland Town Center Merchants Association at the Las Cazuelitas restaurant. Participation in the program is free.

"I want to tell business people what to look for and do if a suspicious-looking person comes into the store," Noville said.

Security and crime prevention are the keys to the program. "Crime prevention is the number one priority of our chamber this year. Incidents of bad checks, robberies, shoplifting and credit card fraud mean a loss of money for our businesses," said Tony Malone, Upland Chamber of Commerce executive director.

Malone said he hopes the program will begin with the downtown area merchants. During the next six months, the chamber plans to present program ideas to businessmen in the city's 14 retail shopping centers.

"We would like to have the program operating in all the commercial areas by Christmas because that is the time when crime is on the increase. We may not be able to visit each area, though, in that time period," Malone said.

The police department already has designed metal signs stating, "Warning, Upland Business Watch Program in Force! If We Don't Call the Police, Another Business Will!" The warnings would be posted at participating shopping centers or businesses.

Noville said he hopes the business program would become as successful as the city's neighborhood watch.

Girl Scouts participate in international program

Two local girls experienced "wider opportunities" with Girl Scouts this summer, heading to two different parts of the country to participate in the national program.

Jennifer McMilon of Rancho Cucamonga and Mary Jane Landaker of Upland were chosen by Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council in Pomona to participate in the national Wider Opportunities program.

McMilon was one of 68 girls chosen to attend "The Wide World of Animals ... And More!" held in Sacramento.

The program featured career choices which combined work with a love for animals. Careers explored included animal nursing, veterinary medicine, and even banking and advertising.

According to scout officials, McMilon was chosen for her Wider Opportunity because of the keen interest she has demonstrated in animals. During the past year she donated her time to work in a pet shop.

Landaker, daughter of Upland residents Collette and John Landaker, attended "Studio 84" in Evansville, Ind.

The program focused on the arts and was conducted by professionals in music, drama, dance and crafts.

Landaker, a six-year veteran of Girl Scouts, was chosen because of her interests in the arts, especially music. In school she has participated in different bands, and at church she has sung in the choir and performed as a soloist.

She is a freshman at Upland High School.

Wider Opportunities is an international program offered by the Girl Scouts of the USA. Its purpose is to deepen the range of girls' experiences as they meet new people in new places.

Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council is a member agency of United Way, incorporated, Greater West End United Way and United Way of Orange County.

Anyone interested in learning more about Girl Scouting can call the council office at 623-2518.

Red Hill Country Club to be site of OPARC ball

"Le Bal de Monte Carlo," featuring the sparkle and glitter of the French Riviera, will be the theme Sept. 15 when the OPARC (Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens) Auxiliary holds the 15th annual ball at Red Hill Country Club, Cucamonga.

Mrs. Travis (Florence) Hunter of Upland, ball chairman, said, the decor will reflect the bright colors, flowers and lights of the famous playground on the southern French seacoast.

Following tradition, the party will feature an informal social hour, gourmet dinner and music for dancing and entertainment by the Lou Catalano band.

In another area, guests may play at casino-type games, provided this year by a South Lake Tahoe resort hotel —

Harvey's Resort Hotel and Casino — which will furnish tables, expertise and several dealers for the casino night portion of this annual black-tie fund raiser, according to George and Audrey Voigt, casino chairmen. Among the local citizens donating their time at the game tables as "dealers" will be Ontario City Councilman Gus Skropos, former Ontario City Councilman Beecher Medlin, Rancho Cucamonga Councilman Chuck Buquet and Jim Medeiros, Daryl Cosby and Jeff Sceranka, local businessmen.

Items for the live and silent auctions have been donated by businesses and individuals. Round-trip tickets for two anywhere-Continental Airlines flies in the continental United States and Mexico have been donated by that airline. Harvey's has donated two sets of accommodations for two people for a two-night, three-day stay at the hotel at Lake Tahoe, including all meals. Other auction items include cases of wine, use of condominiums for a week in Waikiki, Palm Springs and Mexico, dinners and three "Piece of the Winner's Circle" from the former Ontario Motor Speedway.

Another display of special gifts donated to the auxiliary for the event will be sold at silent auction.

Nina Nesbit Pierce of Ontario will be mistress of ceremonies. Assisting Mrs. Hunter with plans for the ball are the following auxiliary members who are chairing committees: Mrs. Jose Brea of Alta Loma, co-chairman; Virginia Ringier of Ontario, finance; Natalie Huebner of Upland and Mrs. Gerald Burger of Alta Loma, decorations; Mrs. Richard Rizzo of Upland, invitations; the Voigts of Upland and Mrs. Robert Dutton of Rancho Cucamonga, casino; Mrs. Catalano of Upland, entertainment; Mrs. John Schroth of Upland, cuisine; Mrs. Davis Cameron of Alta Loma, thank you notes; Mrs. Hunter, program advertising and layout; Mrs. Garrit H. Stukkie of Rancho Cucamonga, reservations; Mrs. Voigt, casino prizes; Mrs. Dutton, hostesses; Mrs. Kenneth Kloepfer of Rancho Cucamonga, special tickets; Mrs. George Yetter of Upland, poster child; Mrs. Earl Vander Schaaf of Chino, guardian angels; Mrs. Ringier and Mrs. Rizzo, silent auction; and Mrs. Brea, live auction.

All proceeds from this major fund-raising event are given to the OPARC Center's general operating fund to aid in support of the Day School, Diversified Industries (an employment and training facility for developmentally disabled people) and other center programs. To date, more than $180,000 has been donated by the auxiliary to the center, which serves western San Bernardino and eastern Los Angeles counties.

Tickets for the ball are $85 a couple and include a full dinner, including wine (compliments of Fillippi Winery). For more information, call 981-1912.

MINIMAL INCISION SURGERY

For disorders such as bunions, corn, calluses and heel spurs, minimal incision surgery (MIS) is one of the newest options. Under a local anesthesia, a small incision is made through which the bony material is either removed or repositioned. Depending on the problem this "invisible" micro-surgical in-office procedure can take as little as 20 minutes to perform. Prime targets for MIS are painful growths of bone that form on top or outside of the toes. These are caused by a hereditary foot imbalance, that is aggravated by friction from improperly fitted shoes. MIS allows the corrective procedure to be accomplished in-office, after which, toes can be aligned in their proper position.

Sixty-two percent of Americans think that it is "normal" for their feet to hurt.

Old MacDonald finds home at the fair

In a world of busy city life and high technology, the Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona offers an oasis of bucolic peace and rural domesticity.

It is Heritage Farm, a working replica of a Midwestern farm at the turn of the century and one of the fair's long-standing attractions. It received a new name and a facelift this summer for the fair which opens Sept. 13.

The farm gives urban dwellers an opportunity to view what American farm life is like.

Included in the attraction this year is a barn, animal corrals, white windmill, silo, smoke house, root cellar and a working blacksmith shop where a village blacksmith will actually use a bellows and red-hot fire to hammer out horseshoes on an anvil.

Visitors will be greeted this year by a farmer and his wife, Clifford and Cleta Dotson of Upland. And the twang in their voices is authentic — she was born in Texas. He was raised in Arkansas.

The two have been married 39 years and are the parents of two daughters, 35 and 29. He worked for General Electric Co. in Ontario for 34 years until his retirement. But his background is in farming. "Been farmin' ever since I could handle a plow," he said.

When the question of milking the cow on Heritage Farm arose, Dotson said: "If they need the cow milked, I can do it."

A lean, leathery, middle-aged man, Dotson appears in a straw farm hat and overalls. He looks like Dorothy's Uncle Henry in "The Wizard of Oz."

Just so Mrs. Dotson, in a poke bonnet and long full-skirted farm dress and white apron, looks like Aunt Em.

"During the fair, I'll be in the farmhouse doing my daily chores," she said. "I'll gather the eggs, do some cooking, work on my crocheting and knitting."

She served visiting newsmen ice cold lemonade and delicious molasses cookies and sugar cookies.

Dotson's daily chores will be those of any farmer — taking care of the garden and tending the animals. The farm will have a sow and piglets, sheep, goats, chickens, ducks, geese, rabbits, a pony and a cow. Nearby will be a pony ride for children and a "cuddling corral" where youngsters may pet small animals.

He plans to raise tomatoes, lettuce, string beans, peas, corn and carrots on his minifarm.

The farm also has a well with a handpump to help him water his crops.

The Dotsons, soft-spoken with an easy humor, are looking forward to the opening of the fair and to talking with visitors.

"I think it's going to be a lot of fun," said Mrs. Dotson.

Clifford and Cleta Dotson of Upland stand before the house on Heritage Farm at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona. It is a replica of a turn-of-the-century Midwestern farmhouse. It will be their home during the run of the fair Sept. 13-30.

Exotic birds are homing in on household pet market

By Patricia Dibsie
Copley News Service

Move over, Fido and Tabby. You're being replaced in the hearts of pet owners by exotic feathered friends, according to statistics gathered by both bird fanciers and pet store retailers.

Sales records since 1980 show that's the way the cracker is crumbling. A survey taken several years under the wing of the American Federation of Aviculture — a national association of bird breeders — indicated that more pet birds were sold than dogs and cats combined. And the numbers have been flying higher and higher ever since.

These days, most every pet store has added a large section devoted to exotic birds, something that was a rarity through the 1970s.

The parakeet is still the first choice of many who select a feathered friend over the traditional hairy, four-legged variety. Parakeets have a reputation for being both entertaining and inexpensive.

But it's the dramatic increase in the sales of cockateels, cockatoos, macaws and parrots — some costing thousands of dollars — that has caused many pet store owners to put out the cash to get in on the action.

The South American toucan sells for $550 to $695; the blue crown Amazon for around $700, and the green-winged macaw for $900 to $1,000. Still not impressed? A Hyacinth macaw from Brazil brings $3,000 to $4,000.

But not all multicolored birds cost a fortune.

The cockateel, a gray Australian bird about twice the size of a parakeet, is now the second most popular bird in the United States. Cockateel prices range from $29.95 to $49.95 in most pet stores. Restrictions forbid the exportation of this bird from its native land, but many Americans are successfully breeding cockateels here, where they're fairly abundant.

Big price tags haven't taken a peck into big business, though.

Cockatoos, which are also native to Australia and on the banned exportation list, are few and far between. Find one and its price will no doubt flutter into the $3,000 to $4,000 range.

The rose-breasted Australian cockatoo in Raymond Busby's "Animal House" hasn't found a home in the two or three months since it has taken up residence in the San Diego pet store. Busby bought it from a private owner and says he has become almost too attached to the 8-year-old bird to let it go even if someone were to come up with the requested $3,500.

"I let it (Busby refuses to give the bird a name and become even more attached) out of the cage most of the day and it has become so much a part of the surroundings that I can't imagine coming to work and not having it here," he said.

"So what's the point of having a bird as a pet?" asks a stranger who has wandered into the store. "A bird sits in a cage and sings or talks when it wants to and messes up newspaper placed at the bottom of the cage. What kind of pet is a bird?"

"You don't have to be around birds very long to know the answer to that one," crows Busby. "A bird can relate to you as much as a dog, and a bird can be taught to talk, too. Birds have more personality than almost any other pet."

"Birds need to be touched, cuddled and loved, especially this one (he's holding his favorite cockatoo). With a few lessons, you'd be surprised at what you can teach a bird to do ... and then there's all that love and loyalty."

Bozo, a blue-and-gold year-old macaw, is another favorite. This bird comes with a $900 price tag "and a lot of personality."

Busby: "Bozo is real shy, but he wants the attention. He needs to be around people and is very loyal.

"People get very attached to their pets, and to have one die that has become like one of the family can be very traumatic. Birds, on the other hand, almost always survive their first owners. Many live at least 75 years and some 100 or 120 years."

Lennie La Riccia, manager and head trainer at another pet store, thinks there's a much simpler explanation for the recent popularity of exotic birds as pets:

"People want a pet with personality, a pet they can love and who will love them back. They want a pet they don't have to walk every night and one that doesn't run up big tabs at the veterinarian. And one that doesn't bring fleas into the house."

"You're describing an exotic bird to the beak," La Riccia added, "and people are beginning to find this out. People are turning to birds and turning away from dogs and cats."

COINS

By Gary L. Palmer
Copley News Service

Pssst. Don't tell anybody but Queen Elizabeth II is getting a face-lift. That's right, and it's not the first for her majesty — it's the second!

And she couldn't be more pleased, for the "face-lift" is actually just a change in her portrait on United Kingdom coinage. The "face-lifter" in this case is Raphael Maklouf.

It was early in 1983 that the Royal Mint invited a select number of artists to produce their ideas for a new portrait of the queen.

Each was sent the same photograph, taken by Lord Snowden — a side view of Queen Elizabeth — and told they could produce a number of variations for consideration. Seventeen artists from the United Kingdom and Commonwealth accepted the challenge, submitting a total of 38 models.

Identified only by number, the designs then were examined by the Royal Mint's 12-member advisory committee, along with representatives of the governments of the Commonwealth countries that had nominated artists to take part in the competition.

It was two portraits by Maklouf that won out and beginning Jan. 1, 1985, it is his visage of Queen Elizabeth II that will appear on British coinage. One is for use on circulating coins from the penny to the pound, while the other is intended for any large commemorative pieces that may be issued in the future.

No longer will numismatic writers refer to the famed Arnold Machin portrait of the queen when describing new British coins.

It was Machin who did the first face-lift on the queen in 1968. His was one of a young monarch, replacing the unadorned and rather stark 1953 Mary Gillick portrait of the queen growing to womanhood.

It was Machin's portrait that won him worldwide numismatic acclaim. Now Maklouf hopes to follow in those footsteps, awaiting the critical analysis of his peers.

His version of Elizabeth is that of a maturing monarch, firm in feature yet not severe. There is a return to the

PHOTO TIPS

By Holt Confer
Copley News Service

When it comes to providing their users with product "how to" information, the photographic industry is probably head and shoulders above everyone else.

I know you've purchased things (as I have) where the manufacturer took a "you-bought-it, you-figure-it out" attitude. And as you struggled either to assemble the product or use it, a solemn vow was taken never to darken that manufacturer's doorstep again.

But unfortunately, that let-the-buyer-figure-it-out attitude hasn't taken over the photo industry. The people who supply equipment and accessories to photographers seem to be especially willing to supply customers and potential customers with all kinds of product use data.

Take Eastman Kodak, for example. The amount of literature coming out of Rochester is awesome — there are books, pamphlets, data sheets, video tapes, movies, slide shows and even media tours stamped with the familiar red "K."

A few weeks back, Kodak photographer Bob Harris was doing a tour of radio and television stations ... and photo columnists. Now Bob Harris is a pretty interesting guy with a job that would rate pretty far up on the "want" list of anyone in the picture taking business.

Bob is the directing photographer for Kodak's multimedia travel productions. To give you some idea how he spends his time, he's done film features in more than 30 countries.

Bob filmed shipwrecks and coral reefs for Kodak's Caribbean show; traveled on cross-country skis to get the feel of Sweden's well-known 53-mile ski race; took his camera inside a Mexican bull ring, to an Australian swamp full of wild game, and into the skies over Acapulco where parachuting was the only way to get the "right" shot.

And if all that wasn't enough to keep him busy, Bob also conducts lectures, does seminars on basic photography and turns out articles for Kodak's well-known "Here's How" series.

However, when I talked to Bob Harris, he was on the eastern half of a swing through the country telling media types about Kodak print films.

By keeping close watch on the types of pictures sent in for processing, as well as by looking at their sales figures, the Kodak photographers can get a pretty accurate idea of just what all of us are doing with our cameras. When they notice a particular type of problem beginning to stand out, they get to work and try to disseminate material to educate us and correct our errant ways.

As you know, Kodak within the past year has introduced a variety of new generation color print films. Known as VR films, this product line has been designed to produce exceptionally sharp color negatives. Available in 100, 200, 400 and 1000 ASA ratings for 35mm cameras, as well as in 200 ASA for the popular disc camera, these new films have some very interesting characteristics. And Bob Harris was traveling the countryside to make certain we all knew just what those characteristics were.

For example, one of the real bugaboos with pictures that go through the vast Kodak processing facility is a lack of sharpness. Now the Kodak technicians know the film is capable of recording extremely sharp detail and they know their processing is carefully controlled so, they reasoned, the fault must lie with the people holding the camera.

One of the reasons pictures are not sharp is due to camera movement. And frequently the Kodak folks discovered, when a camera is hand-held, the photographer is using a film that, in many cases, is too slow.

Selecting a 100 ASA film when 200, 400 or even 1000 ASA should be used, forces the photographer to use slow shutter speeds and wide apertures in cases where it wouldn't really be necessary, a combination that can easily lead to disappointing pictures.

To give yourself a bit more leeway in selecting faster shutter speeds, move up to a faster film. For example, selecting a 200 ASA film over a 100 ASA film will, on an overcast day, allow you to use 1/125 second instead of 1/60 if your aperture is set at f-8; going to a 400 speed film

Modern photo film is a technological marvel — it can have a brightness range of 64 to one. That means one part of the picture can be 64 times brighter (or darker) than another part and still register detail — that's the equivalent of five f-stops.

would allow the use of 1/50 (a good safe shutter speed to eliminate camera movement); using a 1000 ASA film under the same conditions would let you set your aperture between f-8 and f-11, and use 1/500 for a shutter speed.

STAMPS

By Lea Blauvelt
Copley News Service

A crime prevention stamp will be released by the U.S. Postal Service on Sept. 26 in Washington, D.C. McGruff the Crime Dog will be the subject of the 20-cent stamp's design.

The stamp is being issued in connection with national Crime Prevention Month, which begins Oct. 1.

The vertically oriented stamps show a familiar portrait of McGruff, dressed in his usual trench coat, with the slogan, "Take a Bite Out of Crime," across the top and "McGruff/The Crime Dog/USA 20c" in three lines in the bottom left corner.

The image of McGruff was developed by the Crime Prevention Coalition to teach people precautions that can be taken to prevent crime and provide safety information. The theme "Take a Bite Out of Crime" was used to boost public confidence and encourage participation in citizen crime-prevention activities.

The customary first-day cancellation procedures will be observed.

Collectors are encouraged to purchase stamps at local post offices, affix to addressed envelopes and mail to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Crime Prevention Stamp, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20066-9991.

Customers desiring the USPS to affix the stamps should send addressed envelopes, plus 20 cents for each stamp to be affixed, to: Crime Prevention Stamp, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20066-9992. Do not send cash; personal checks accepted.

Postmark all requests for cancellation no later than Oct. 26.

Although no official notices from the USPS have arrived yet, we have learned, through other sources, that the USPS issued a 30-cent stamp in the Great Americans series Sept. 2 honoring Dr. Frank C. Laubach, founder of a worldwide literacy movement in Benton, Mo.

Issued on the 100th anniversary of his birth there, the stamp was designed by Richard Sparks and shows a full-face portrait developed from several photographs. "Frank C. Laubach" runs up the left vertical side of the stamp, while "USA 30c" is placed in the lower right corner.

Born Sept. 2, 1884, Laubach decided on a career as a missionary while still a youth. After receiving a BA in sociology from Princeton in 1909, he worked as a social worker in New York and enrolled in both the Union Theological Seminary and Columbia University there. Graduating from Columbia in 1911 and from the seminary in 1913, he was ordained a congregational minister in 1914.

While working with the Moros in the Philippines, Laubach developed a system of breaking down a language into its basic phonetic sounds, and with charts and Roman letters and pictures provided the Moros with a written language. Later, a newspaper was printed in that language. The system was a success and it could be used anywhere.

In 1935, while on furlough, he visited Malaya, Singapore, Ceylon, India, Palestine, Syria and Turkey, helping local missionaries prepare charts. By the end of his furlough, a World Literacy Committee had been founded in New York to provide funds for the continuation of his work.

With World War II halting his return to the East, Laubach took his message of literacy to the Caribbean and Central and South America.

The usual procedures for first-day cancellations apply. Send stamped, self-addressed envelopes to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Benton, PA 19814-9992. Send unstamped ones, plus 30 cents per stamp to be used to: Laubach Stamp, Postmaster, Benton, PA 19814-9992. Postmark all orders by Oct. 2.

ST. KITTS — The St. Kitts postal authorities released a new definitive series featuring marine wildlife July 4.

On stamps of 14 values were pictured the Cushion Star (5 cents), Rough File Shell (10 cents), Red-Lined Cleaning Shrimp (15 cents), Bristleworm (20 cents), Flamingo Tongue (25 cents), Christmas Tree worm (30 cents), Pink-Tipped Anemone (40 cents), Smallmouth Grunts (50 cents), Glasseye Snapper (60 cents), Reef Squirrel fish (75 cents), Flamefish and sea fan ($1), Reef butterfly fish ($2), Flackbar Soldierfish ($5) and the Coca Damselfish ($10).

For direct purchase of St. Kitts' stamps, write to the St. Kitts Philatelic Bureau, GPO, St. Kitts, West Indies. Request information and order blanks.

Deputies ready for speeders

Sheriff's deputies will be keeping an eye on motorists speeding near school sites, according to officials from the Rancho Cucamonga Substation.

Deputies will issue citations to motorists who violate the 25 mph speed limit while children are present.

Children are not always paying attention to cars when they are walking to and from school or to friend's houses, officials said. Motorists are asked to take special care during the first weeks of school.

Music festival to raise money for disabled kids

Disabled children and young adults will benefit from a bluegrass festival Oct. 21 at the Chino Junior Valley Fairgrounds.

Net proceeds from the festival will go to Held Us Grow (HUG), a non-profit group from Rancho Cucamonga.

Volunteers are needed to transport disabled children to the fairgrounds on Central and Edison. HUG representative Diane Mundy said buses or vans are required for the transportation effort.

For more information about the festival, contact Mundy at 989-7278 or Pat Ferraccio at 989-6811.

"Couped" busts (i.e., cut off above the shoulders) used during the first 50 years of the century.

Since at least 1662, the effigy of a king normally has been couped, though occasionally as an additional distinction between gold and other coins, the effigy on the lower denominations included some drapery and shoulder.

Portraits of queens, however, normally have not been couped. The Gillick and Machin versions of the queen were not couped and Maklout's second version for future commemoratives will not be couped.

In the new portraits Elizabeth II is shown with the diadem she wears on her way to and from the State Opening of Parliament. Also noticeable on the new portrait is a teardrop earring on the right facing profile of the queen, as well as a choker-style necklace.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Experts rate the best in table wines

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

Varietal wines such as Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon and Zinfandel are prized, but most wine consumers drink generics — which are usually blended wines — on a daily basis.

The names for the popular generics are Burgundy and Chablis, but these have been less than successful in marketing premium generic wine, bottled in 0.75-milliliter bottles with corks.

The quality of these generics can vary, so I staged a tasting of a number of the white and red generics. My panel found some interesting results.

We were surprised that the white wines turned out fresh and well made, and drier than we found them in a similar experience with generics two years ago.

All the whites were between $4 and $5.50 a bottle, and vary by price depending on the shop. The best wines in the view of the judges:

1. 1983 Jefferson Cellars Vin Blanc — A huge floral aroma, probably of Riesling or Gewurztraminer, made this wine tops by a tiny margin over the next group. The wine, made by Monticello Cellars, is fresh and relatively dry.

2. Tie among 1983 Chateau St. Jean Vin Blanc, 1983 Callaway Vin Blanc, 1983 Zaca Mesa Toyon Blanc and 1982 Monterey Vineyards Classic White.

The Chateau St. Jean was the most like a typical dry table wine one might like to have with dinner. It is two-thirds Sauvignon Blanc, and the aroma is typical of that variety.

The Toyon Blanc is the best Zaca Mesa has made. It is well balanced, relatively dry and has a slight citric tone in the finish. The Callaway may be the best white wine Callaway has made. It is floral, relatively soft and slightly sweet.

Monterey Vineyards has had good success with its Classic White, and this one is most interesting. A blend of Chenin Blanc, French Colombard, Pinot Blanc and Chardonnay (among other varieties), it offers a slight weedy (one person said peanutty) aroma, but a dry, crisp finish.

6. 1983 Grand Cru Vin Maison — A Sauvignon Blanc, this wine is slightly grassy, and slightly sweet, but the finish is crisp. Good value.

7. Fetzer Blanc de Blanc — a slightly earthy-chalky aroma and medium finish make the wine interesting, but it has a relatively flat finish.

8. 1982 Geyser Peak Sonoma Vintage White — slight weedy, vegetative character, flabby.

The tasters felt the top six wines to be good values, notably the St. Jean — the most expensive at $5.75.

looking for oil and natural gas on the Amazon River for Brazil when he met Tom Moga, an Upland attorney, a founder of the Mt. Baldy Yacht Club.

"His steering was out, so was his refrigerator and his battery was dead," Keegan said. He and his crew helped the Upland man out and showed him around town.

After completing the research project, Keegan returned to the United States. That's when he decided to come to California and bought a 1941 44-foot sailboat. "The engine is shot ... I figured I could rig a sling with a block and tackle and wing on the boom, then I could crawl around on the boat and work," he said.

The boat payment would be $300, less than the $400 he is now paying in rent. "I wouldn't have to pay for electricity or gas for my van. I have a friend in Newport who will let me tie up," he said.

Most importantly, the sailboat will give purpose to his life; it "gives me more of a reason to live," Keegan said.

Keegan hopes to get his sailboat into working form and then take charter cruises. He wants to show what people can do who have severe injuries. "I'd like to take other people in my condition sailing."

Now Keegan is looking for "a lady crazy enough to live and sail on a boat and take care of me." □

A big day for s

Despite soaring temperatures, owners of small businesses in Rancho Cucamonga declared their first community awareness event, Saturday, a success.

Members of the Rancho Cucamonga Small-Business Association said a steady flow of people — and soft drinks sold by the Alta Loma Boosters — made the 100 degree-plus day bearable.

"The sheriffs estimated more than 1,000 people came through here," said Jim Kibbie, organization chairman, of the event staged at the corner of Carnelian Street and Base Line Road.

Anyone owning a small business or business license in Rancho Cucamonga was welcome to set up a booth with informational materials at the fair. Nothing was sold, except refreshments at food booths sponsored by the Boosters and the Etiwanda High School Key Club.

"We're just little businesses and need (interaction) between each other and for each other," said Shirley Patrick. Patrick is secretary for the organization. There were about 40 booths for visitors to see, including demonstrations by the sheriff's and fire departments. Live entertainment was another fair feature.

"We're small businesses just letting people know what we have to offer," said Barbara Adkins, professional typist and notary public.

Her Executive One Typing Service does word processing, typing and transcription and operates from her home.

Rancho Cucamonga resident Dee Rout was among the many visitors the heat didn't keep away. "I read about it (in the newspaper) and decided to get out and see what was happening," she said.

Although not a part of the fair, Rout and her husband own a small brass wholesale manufacturing company.

Grace Brazell, owner of Rancho

Owners of small businessmen in Rancho Cucamonga had the opportunity to display their products and services at a Small Business Awareness Fair last Saturday. Businesses included Lunch in a Basket (left photo) with Kim Simmons, delivery person and Valarie Atwood (standing in the back), business owner and Debbie Briones (above) from the Trophy Case. Barbara Adkins operates her Executive One typing service (right) from a office her husband converted in their home which includes an IBM word processor. Grace Brazell, owner of Rancho Cucamonga Flower Shop (above right), displayed a wide variety of flower arrangements at the fair.

Cucamonga Flower Shop, said she was pleased with the fair.

"I had a lot of good leads. A lot of people didn't know about us or where we were. I gave out a lot of business cards," she said.

Valarie Atwood, who opened Lunch in a Basket in June, said she used the Small-Business Fair as way to expand her business by gaining greater exposure. She gave visitors an opportunity to sample her fresh fruit cup.

"I explained about our services and a lot of people were real excited," she said. Atwood offers a daily lunch service for people in professional buildings and beauty salons, and caters private picnics for groups. She also offers Lunchograms.

The Rancho Cucamonga Small-Business Association began organizing in March and officially formed in April.

"It seemed like there was a need for an organization for smaller business owners which is free to any person in business in Rancho Cucamonga," said Kibbie, owner of Midland Maintenance.

The business group has held seminars on marketing techniques, law enforcement and how small-business people can work with the Regional Occupational Program.

The group will probably hold more informational seminars and possibly plan another business fair in spring.

The group does not ask for dues, but does seek member involvement. "We have never turned a business down (for membership). We only ask two things, that they participate and that they are located in Rancho Cucamonga," Kibbie said.

The Rancho Cucamonga Small-Business Association meets Tuesday mornings at Rancho Deli in the Gemco Center. There are about 40 members and all owners of small businesses are welcome to attend. □

Gladiola corms need to be pulled up

By Patrick Denton
Copley News Service

As fall settles upon us, it's time to turn our attention to garden items to be brought into storage for the winter.

One of these is our collection of gladiolus corms, which can be lifted any time now. It's a simple operation, but following a few basic principles will ensure both successful storage and a repeat performance of their summer's beauty next year.

Using a digging fork inserted into the ground several inches away from the base of the gladiolus plant, lift the plants carefully, just a few at a time. Right away, cut the foliage off about an inch above the top of the corm. I use a stout pair of kitchen scissors.

The foliage should be burned or disposed of in the garbage, not composted, as thrip infestation is common in many areas. It's a good idea to get rid of any possible source of future trouble.

If you like to keep your gladiolus labeled with variety name and color, separate each corm or group of corms with the correct label. I brush as much dirt as possible from the corms and set them in shallow boxes, placing their labels with them.

As you lift your gladiolus corms, you'll notice at the top a single, double or sometimes triple corm or cluster of large corms that are light in color, new and fresh looking. These are the newly developed corms that will be planted next spring.

Underneath will be a darkened, shriveled mass — that's the corm you planted last spring. It will be discarded later, but for now leave everything together.

Clustered around the newly developed gladiolus corms you usually will find some little offset or baby corms. These, too, can be set with their parents in the shallow boxes and saved. Planted in a nursery bed in the spring and lifted in the fall, these will take two or three years to develop into flowering-size corms.

Don't do any cleaning up of the corms yet. First, they need to be set, uncrowded in their shallow boxes, into a dry, warm place with good air circulation to dry or cure for about three weeks. Use the warmest room in the house for this curing time, or a warm cupboard. I place my freshly dug gladiolus corms in a large cupboard that also houses our water heater. There, it's very dry and cozy warm so that in a few weeks they're dry enough to clean.

You'll know when they're ready to clean when the old, shriveled corm pries away easily from the new corm. Clean away all the old, shriveled roots, as well, and any baby corms you do not plan on growing. I should warn you that these baby corms, or cormels, can turn into a weed problem in the garden in warm winter areas.

Make those outdoor areas liveable

How do you make a deck livable? You turn it into an enjoyable outdoor room by furnishing it. And not merely with folding chairs and a couple of chaise lounges, for these do not a contented patio make.

A wood deck is rustic, and its permanent furniture should be rustic.

First come benches to sit or lie on, then a table to serve cool drinks or alfresco suppers on, then screens to assure privacy or to supply a visual third dimension, then a trellis for shade, lighting and bug zapper, a barbecue grill and flower-filled planters.

Without built-ins a deck is just a wood floor with slits. It begs for built-ins of the same warm, workable material. Fortunately, these can all be constructed by the home handyman.

Lumberyards and garden shops offer sources of designs and details for making outdoor furniture. Western red cedar is a favored outdoor material.

Wood benches can be multi-purpose. At the edges of a deck, benches prevent stepping off, as well as serving as handy seating.

If the dropoff is risky, a back should be added as a safety railing. Benches with backs

Botanical gardens will offer classes to the public for first time in history

For the first time in its 57-year history, Rancho Santa Ana Botanic Garden in Claremont will initiate a program of community education classes in October.

The aim is to increase knowledge and enhance the sensitivity of the general public to the natural world.

There will be eight courses offered in the fall quarter, including botanical illustration, edible and poisonous wild mushrooms, field identification of native California plants, plant photography, silk screening designs from nature and a workshop on growing native plants from seed.

Two courses will be offered for children, one on hawks, owls and other birds of prey and the other on pond studies. Classes will be scheduled during the day, in the evening and on weekends. They will vary in length from one day to six weeks. Class sizes are limited and advance registration is advised.

Rancho Santa Ana Botanic Garden is a private institution dedicated to botanical research and the maintenance of an outstanding collection of native California plants. Visitors are welcome to tour the 100-acre facility from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week. No picnicking or animals are allowed on the grounds, however.

Ant repellent may be wave of the future

By Robert P. Studer
Copley News Service

Termites, one of the worst banes of mankind, have a common enemy with man: the ant. But termites have learned to secrete a chemical that is so unappetizing to ants that even a hungry one will scurry the other way. The secretion oozes from the heads of termite soldiers whose job it is to protect the soft-bodied (and delicious to ants) termite workers.

Yet this powerful repellent would not even be noticed by humans. So, scientists at the University of California at Riverside are seeking a way to adapt this repellent as a weapon in man's own war against the pesky ant.

They are seeking to copy the termite ant repellent as a means of protecting picnics, kitchens and even citrus groves against the ant. They have found that the powerful repellent, which even in large amounts would probably be unnoticed by humans, is not toxic to ants or other living things in the natural habitat and, therefore, would be safe for extended use around humans and domestic animals.

Yet, says Rudolf Scheffrahn, a Ph.D. candidate at UC-Riverside, it may prove to be even more effective than current pesticides.

"Ants gather information," he pointed out, "through their antennae. They are so clever that they will not cross an area where pesticides have poisoned fellow members of the colony. That is why a number of highly toxic, fast-acting pesticides fail to have any significant effect."

Yet, consumers spend millions of dollars a year on household pesticides, mostly to control ants and cockroaches, according to Michael Rust, who initiated the UC-Riverside research project with Scheffrahn. As a result of this project, picnic areas, homes and citrus orchards may someday remain ant-free as the result of a circle of invisible shields repelling them.

Although ants, directly, do not attack citrus groves, they create havoc by an indirect means. They domesticate aphids and scales as a food supply, and the aphids and scales attack the trees.

Recent UC Riverside research has shown, the scientists point out, that if ants and dusting for them could be controlled in citrus groves, growers could cut insecticide use in half with a potential savings, in the state of California, of some $25 million.

"We think the concept of repellent barriers will begin to replace the idea of killing ants with pesticides," Rust said. "The repellents will be formulated to last longer than they do in nature. Because they offer a proven form of behavior modification, we believe they will be more effective for the money than poisons which ants learn to avoid."

Incidentally, the UC Riverside scientists add, ants — and termites — are not all bad. They play an important role in the environment, by breaking down dead vegetation and contributing nutrients to the soil, as well as aerating it.

On another front in the insect wars, UC-Riverside scientists have discovered at least one chemical to which the common household cockroach apparently has not developed an increasing resistance — 97 to 99 percent pure boric acid in powder form.

On the other hand, they point out, "in the past several years, there's been increasing concern that roaches, particularly the German cockroach, are showing resistance to chemical control."

Resistance occurs, Rust pointed out, when cockroaches become physiologically shielded from what once was a lethal poison due to genetic changes. "It often is associated with compounds which are highly toxic, and which are applied repeatedly over a period of years," adds Don Reiersen, UC-Riverside entomologist and Rust's colleague in the roach studies.

Such resistance has been noted, they said, in the carbamates and the organophosphates, the first used in household pesticides for roaches and the latter by professional exterminators.

When a pesticide is highly lethal, they explained, it kills large numbers of roaches, leaving only a few strong individuals which carry on the genetic ability to withstand doses of the pesticide. The more lethal the pesticide, the more it selects strong individuals to breed a race of resistant roaches.

And, since they breed prodigiously, they said, with each female German roach producing about 240 offspring during an average life-span of five months, the super-breed of resistant roaches can occur in a relatively short time.

Cockroaches harbor a variety of organisms harmful to man — Staphylococcus, Salmonella (which causes food poisoning), poliomyelitis and hepatitis B.

Outdoor decks can be made into a living area for the family and friends

must be fastened securely to the deck.

One strong, handsome style is to shape each support as a frame, with the bottom piece to rest flat for nailing to the deck. Beveled corners are nice, butting leg ends to the deck more durable. For a bench back, extend the rear leg and tilt it slightly.

Simplest style for the seat is to nail 2-by-4s flat to the top piece of the supports, leaving slight gaps for drainage. Comfortable heights range up to 18 inches, but lower if a pad will be laid over it.

A bench, unlike folding furniture, will support heavy planters, too. Coating the top with water repellent will help divert runoff from plants.

Widen a bench into a platform and you have a table as well. One Northwest architect recently designed such a platform five feet square, and put it on oversize casters so it can be brought front and center, or wheeled to a quiet corner.

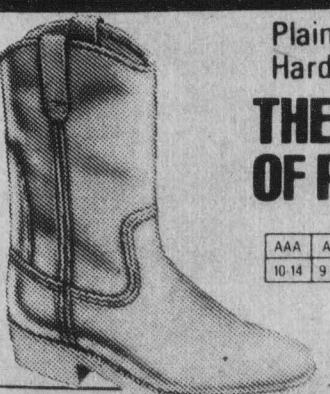

This movable bench serves as a coffee table, seating or base for small planters, and sometimes all three at once.

Its top is the same 2-by-6 inch cedar boards as the deck. The unit is boxed in on the sides by 2-by-10-inch planks. Ledger boards nailed 1½ inches below the top inside edge of the sides support the decking, which is nailed in to provide rigidity.

Material was prestained with a water repellent to blend with the decking and the cedar board-and-batten walls of the house.

Highlighted by pots of hybrid geraniums and impatiens, and bright pillows, this square bench is a useful piece of outdoor furniture, permanent but movable.

Upland seeks initial victory

The numbers were slightly different, but the outcome was basically the same as last year. And Upland High School football coach Leo Guest hopes the trend doesn't continue in Week 2.

The Highlanders' 1984 opener, a 13-8 loss to North High of Riverside last Friday, was strangely reminiscent of the 1983 opener, a 14-6 loss to North. Guest was hoping for better than a three-point improvement.

And as he prepares his team to face Northview Friday night at 7:30 at Highlander Stadium, Guest is hopeful that the new fall season won't be a succession of repeats.

A year ago Northview dumped the Scots 7-3, an outcome Upland will seek to turn around Friday.

"They (the Huskies) didn't surprise us," Guest said after the opening loss. "We missed tackles and it cost us. On that one play we missed two tackles short and three or four more down the field and it cost us the game."

The play in question was a 61-yard pass play from Tony Jones to Albert Negrete that went for a touchdown midway through the third period.

Negrete slipped away from a pair of Upland tackles.

Filippi MVP in Gulf Coast League

Former Upland High School pitcher Jamie Filippi has been named "Star of Stars," symbolic of the most valuable player, in the Gulf Coast Rookie League for the 1984 season.

Filippi, a 20-year-old right-hander for the Sarasota White Sox, was tabbed for the award by the Howe News Bureau, statistician for the league.

Filippi posted a 10-1 record in the regular campaign, going 8-0 before dropping his only decision to the Braves. He had a glossy 0.65 earned run average, registering 76 strikeouts and only 19 walks over 75 innings.

Filippi was named to the Gulf Coast All-Star Team along with teammates Jorge Alcazar (first base), Luis Peraza (second base) and Jerry Bertolani (outfield).

White Sox manager Steve Dillard was voted manager of the year.

Upland harriers ready for opener

Upland High School cross country teams make their 1984 season bows Saturday in the Woodbridge Invitational in Irvine.

Coach Bob Loney is working with 13 letter winners from a year ago, seven boys and six girls. A strong newcomer to the girls' squad is improving Upland chances further.

Leading figures among the boys are senior Paul Wenz, whose best time for three miles last year was 15:55; senior Tim Pena (16:02); junior Cliff Gill (16:06); junior Scott McCallum (16:55); senior David Simpson (17:09); sophomore Marc Gray (17:44) and senior Brian Nasif (18:05).

Senior Tiffany Prusia, who was runner-up in the Baseline League last year and who recorded a best time of 18:28, leads returnees to the girls' squad.

Other veterans back are senior Jennifer Symonds, 23rd in the league meet; senior Cathy Vaughan (20:34); sophomore Glenda Smith (20:47); Lisa Gillespie (20:48) and senior Pam Gray (21:04).

Upland's talented newcomer is junior Amy Callow, a transfer from Claremont Webb.

Loney sees his teams highly competitive again in the Baseline races. Upland was second to Damien in the boys' competition in 1983 and second to Alta Loma in the girls.

Highlander varsity boys, who have qualified for CIF post-season action 17 years in a row, have won 105 of their last 115 dual meets.

In the same span, the UHS jayvees have won 111 of 115 and the frosh-sophs 109 of 122.

Thinking of Placing A Want-Ad? Your Results Will Depend On Readership...And More Ads Means Greater Readership

The success...or failure...of a Want-Ad is no mystery. It all depends on the number of people who read it. And readership is easily measured. Just put yourself in the reader's place! If YOU were looking for a car, a job, or an apartment to rent, where would you look first? IN THE PUBLICATION THAT OFFERS THE MOST TO CHOOSE FROM. THE LARGEST SELECTION. So doesn't it make sense when you have a car to sell, a job to offer, an apartment to rent, YOUR ad will get better response in that same publication?

We're proud of the fact that we carry more Classified advertising than any other publication in the West End and we've been doing it for years. We're also proud of the fact that our circulation has now reached 40,000, allowing YOUR ad to be read by 92,000 readers.
